ZI:SIN Silver Bullion

The Twelve Guardians

ZI:SIN are the Twelve Guardians assigned to protect twelve directions. They serve protection to the world against evil forces from 12 directions at all times. Whenever god is on duty for wiping out the demons or cleansing the plague, ZI:SIN will be the commanders who would lead god's army, roaming on the battlefield, bringing up and dispersing wind and rain, and their unique ability of transformation would scare off and prevent demons entering into our world. Although they are in human forms but each of them wears mythical creature helmet and carries their own weapons on the sacred battlefield.

ZI:SIN 'GALLUS'

GALLUS is a messenger of light that is as bright as the sun. The demons from the dark side would not hesitate to disappear right away when they see the bright light and hear the roaring sound from GALLUS. The splendid pointed helmet also enables GALLUS to possess the power to foresee the upcoming events.

ZI:SIN 'CANIS'

CANIS is a guider with loyalty and reliability. It faithfully protects god and stays alert at all times no matter where it is. Whenever a demon approaches it would immediately manage to suppress the enemy at once. When god is about to battle the evil forces of the world, CANIS would stand in the front line of the 12 troops and lead god's army as a spearhead.

HEAD

Traditionally, ancient Korean folks made 「Gwi-myeon-wa (Yong-myeon-wa) : normally called "Do ggae bi* Ki-wa"」 and hung at the both ends of roof tiles for the purpose of placing a stronger spirit to chase away evil spirits.

The Do ggae bi on the Gwi-myeon-wa, unlike its grotesque looks, has a distinct humane and humorous characteristic.

Do ggae bi is Korea's own unique mythical being referred as a ghost, a monster or a god, similar to the hob-goblin from Western culture.

* Do ggae bi : Do ggae bi is Korea's own unique ghost, monster or a god, similar to the hob-goblin from Western culture.
